

My Social Media Manifesto

- 1. I shall not over tweet. I am interesting BUT not that interesting.
- 2. A relationship status is something between two people and not a 'drop down menu' option.
- 3. I will get into less trouble if I use more punctuation and fewer emoticons.
- 4. I will not check into train stations, my home or my bathtub, as I might as well write 'Loner' on my forehead.
- 5. I shall honour my pet's dignity and lack of typing skills and NOT create a Facebook profile for them.
- 6. I will in fact lose friends if I'm tag happy with unflattering photos.
- 7. I shall not complain about yet another Facebook redesign.
- 8. Baby updates are only of interest to me and my mother (who's not on Facebook anyway).
- 9. #overlylonghashtagsarentfunnyandusuallyunreadable
- 10. A half naked profile photo in front of a bathroom mirror reveals only my poor choice of bathroom tiles.
- 11. One can date and get laid without using a username and password.
- 12. I shall not bitch online. Every post, comment or share I make will be positive and brilliant. Like moi.
